a project brought to you by {papermash.co.uk}

supplies

vellum baking parchment can also work paper doilies available at {papermash.co.uk} battery operated tea lights do not use conventional candles glass votives you can also use recycled jars and other glass containers double sided tape

scissors, ruler and pencil

instructions

step one: Start by cutting a piece of vellum to fit within a cylindrical votive or jar as shown. Use a pencil and ruler to ensure straight edges.

step two: Adhere a doily to cut vellum with small pieces of double stick tape or with intermittent dabs of glue from a glue stick.

step three: Cut away excess doily so that it is flush with the edges of the vellum.

step four: Roll the vellum into a cylinder and place within votive or jar. Use an additional piece of double stick tape to hold in place if needed.

step five: Enjoy - illuminate with a battery operated tea light.

important note

For safety, please use these responsibly. Use with battery operated tea lights only. Do not use with open flame.
